Approach

CFF's Research and Evaluation Division collaborates with key stakeholders to develop research designs and effectively implement measurement, analytic, reporting and dissemination practices to improve the lives of children and families.

Our approach integrates the social, cultural-linguistic and policy environments of the programs we research and evaluate. We prioritize empowering vulnerable populations and systems capacity development at the national, local, state and tribal levels.

Expertise

Our successful partnerships include collaborative evaluations with diverse populations including:

- Substance use disorder (SUD) treatment
- Child & family welfare
- Family, juvenile, adult & veteran drug courts
- Public & mental health
- Early childhood & special education
- Suicide prevention initiatives
- Workforce development
- Homelessness
- Teen pregnancy prevention
