

The Collaborative Practice Model for Family Recovery, Safety and Stability

Collaboration is not just a useful tool, but a necessity for success

The Collaborative Practice Model provides ten system linkage elements that child welfare agencies, substance abuse treatment providers, family courts and other agencies can use to collaborate with each other.

This publication defines and provides examples of collaborative practice in each of the ten system linkage elements.

Collaborative groups can use this information to guide their own efforts to implement collaborative practice in their own communities.
